

Dear Elandré

I really have to thank you SO much for your advice.

Since being little girls, we all in general learn to get rid of unwanted hair mostly by means of shaving and this has always been the route for me to.

However, I always limited this to my legs and bikini areas only.

I have always considered myself more hairy than I would want to be, especially with the hair on my forearms... I always thought it was a bit more than I would have wanted it to be.

The first time I saw your arms, I thought you were so fortunate not to have any hairs on your arms and when I complimented you on this and you mentioned that you actually shave them off, I was completely surprised. I never thought that it could even be a possibility to shave the hairs on ones arms same as one would do on your legs. (Thinking back, I don't know why I considered it any different).

None the less, that same day I tried it and shaved it all off.

It looked amazing! I cannot believe that I never attempted doing this a long time ago!

(But then again, I never had somebody giving me this good advice on this subject before.)

Even when the hairs start to grow back, it's hardly visible and the hairs are so much softer than I though it would be. I then just shave my arms along with my legs when shaving is due again. It shaves easily and quickly.

Once again, Elandré, THANK YOU!

I look forward to what else you have up your sleeve... keep up the good advice.

Lots of love ☺
